

What Bryant Could Not See.

An excellent illustration of the false representation which is the chief stock in trade of the gold monometallists is the following extract from an editorial in the local organ of Wall street:

Bryant cannot see that proximity to a silver standard nearly denuded the country of capital and brought commerce to a standstill in 1893 and 1894.

Bryant cannot see this nor can any one else who knows anything about the bankers' panic of '93 and '94. The coinage of silver had nothing to do with that scare except in so far as the persistent and illegal adherence of the Administration to the gold standard made every dollar of silver outstanding and every ounce of bullion bought by the Treasury an obligation against the Government's stock of gold.

It was this devotion to the gold standard by which the money system of the Government was turned into an inverted pyramid with the apex resting on the gold reserve which enabled the gold ring to create a scare, corner gold and force the Government into such straits that millions were squeezed out of it on bond deals.

It was gold monometallism, not an approach to silver coinage, which "brought commerce to a standstill in 1893 and 1894."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
